Not illustrated. 1908 Excerpt: . . . as of a nearer relation, and going more naturally together; the Commentators being certainly mistaken, who would have a Metonymie in this place. The third Verse I can scarce believe legitimate: the words speak nothing but motion, and the numbers are so ratling 35 that nothing can be more repugnant to the general repose and silence which the Poet describes; or, if any Copies might favour the conjecture, I should rather read, cum medio librantur sydera cursu. For nothing can be more Poetical, than to suppose the Stars rest (as it were poizd) in their Meridian; and this 5 would not only express it to be Midnight, but heighten the Poets design, which by the common reading is absolutely destroyd. The fifth line seems to bear a doubtful face, and looks not unlike something of equivocation: an ordinary Grammarian would seek no further than the 10 antecedent, volucres, to refer these relatives to; and might construe Wild ducks and Woodcocks, what the Poet intended for Fish in the Sea and the wild Beasts of the Forest. Besides this, I find none amongst the Latins that deserves 15 to be brought into comparison. In the Italian, Ariosto (whose every description is said to be a master-piece) in this is not over-fortunate; he is easie and smooth, but produces nothing of his own invention. He only enlarges on a thought of Virgils, which yet he leaves without that 20 turn which might give it perfection. What, I think,...
