Not illustrated. 1851 Excerpt: . accents of his equinoctial mood, might say-- Great I must call them, for they conquered me. There is a passage in Byron, often selected for quotation, in which, towards the close of his greatest poem, he brings the power and immensity of the sea into contrast with the weakness and littleness of man. The charm of verse has, in our opinion, seldom been more abused than in this splenetic pecan to the brute strength Counties; smile. of winds and waves, leaving, as it does, unnoticed the great fact of their habitual submission to the moral and intellectual powers of man. To make the pervading sentiment of these famous stanzas as sound as their cadence is sonorous, shipwreck should be the rule, and safe passage the exception. Among the greatest assertions of that qualified supremacy which Providence has delegated to the human race over the destructive...
