This paragraph, from a case study of the LA case, provides a telling example of the extent to which intermediaries have been involved in these efforts: The Green Careers Training Initiative is being designed by the Los Angeles Infrastructure and Sustainable Jobs Collaborative, a public-private partnership of key stakeholders led by the Regional Economic Development Institute (REDI), an intermediary based at Los Angeles Trade-Technical College (LATTC). The collaborative includes SCOPE LA Apollo; the Mayors Office; the LADWP LA Dept of Water and Power ; the Los Angeles Unified School District; California State University Los Angeles (CSULA) College of Engineering, Computer Science, and Technology; the IBEW Local 18-LADWP Joint Training Institute; the Southern California Gas Company; Metropolitan Water District of Southern California; and the 3 Southeast-Crenshaw Worksource (WIA one-stop) Center. As of this writing, these collaborations are successfully training workers and placing them in green jobs. Interestingly, beneficiaries of the programs come from quite different walks of life, including young, entry-level workers with little experience in the relevant trades, such as building or electrical work, as well as older, more experienced workers, already in these fields but needing skill upgrades. One example of a successful collaborative training program is the Electrical Training Institute of Southern California (ETI) a labor-management partnership jointly sponsored by a union - the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers - and a business coalition of private contractors. The training follows an apprenticeship model, requiring over 1, 000 hours and classroom work...
