It would be a good idea if we took a stronger look at renewable resources, namely, things that grow every year and that are available to us. Back in President Carters administration, we had numerous hearings then, in the Agriculture Committee and the Foreign Relations Committee, trying to see if we could establish more independence. This has waxed and waned as times have gone on. Sometimes we have become less urgent about the situation. Even now, many Americans are not really aware of how critical a problem we may have, although increasingly they are becoming aware as crisis occurs in our power grids or natural things transmission or debates over general supplies. Having said that, it has always struck me as curious why the Nation as a whole did not see more urgency in establishing bio-fuels, leaving aside what the base would be. Those of us who are involved in corn farming have always fostered ethanol from corn. That has proceeded. But ethanol could come, as we have heard around this table, from all sorts of bio-fuel sources, as a matter of fact. Testimony by Jim Woolsey, former Director of the CIA, has suggested that there are very promising sources in switch grasses and sugar canes and even bark on trees. A good number that might finally get us to a cost point that is equivalent or better than that of petroleum based source. That, it seems to...
